On Saturday, February 6th, Northeast Montana scored a significant honor when the Nashua Por-Q-Bots won the First Place Champions Award at the Montana FIRST Lego League Championship in Bozeman. Getting this award is such a noteworthy achievement that it includes an invitation to compete in the FLL World Festival in Atlanta, Georgia in April. To earn the Champions award, a team must score well in all of the categories, so that their total team point score is the highest.

The FIRST Lego League season starts out with over 14,800 teams in the US and Canada. Only 36 teams are invited from the Championship Tournaments in these two countries. An additional 10 teams are invited through an FLL Values selection process. Out of the original number of teams involved, less than half of one percent are invited to the FLL world Festival. The Por-Q-Bots are part of that tiny portion of FLL teams. The FLL World Festival includes 33 teams from other countries, to make a total of only 84 teams invited.

The team is comprised entirely of Nashua School Students. There are nine team members, and two student mentors. The students (all from 5th and 6th grade) are Jordan Ramsbacher, Shae Fisher, Natasha Chamerlain, Nolan Viste, Chase Williams, Nicole Williams, Shaylin Barnett, Morgan Guttenberg, and Ryleigh Delich. The two seventh grade student mentors are Sandy Viste and Ryan Scanlan. Coaches for this winning team include Laura Wagner, Janet Williams, Ryan Williams, and Patti Scanlan.

What was the participants favorite part of their winning weekend in Bozeman? Here is what some said:

Ryleigh Delich: "When they announced that we won. It was the very last trophy of all of them on the table. I knew the last trophy was the biggest one, and I didn't think it would be us. I didn't know it was us until everyone started screaming!"

Ryan Scanlan: "When our name was announced—no words can express it."

Chase Williams: "I liked it when we got to the target spot every round. We even made it there twice one round when we decided to start that mission again!"

Shae Fisher: "I liked it when everyone in the gym yelled 3, 2, 1, Lego! to start. And, I liked the ribs at our celebration party at Famous Dave's."

Jordan Ramsbacher: "I thought it was great when we did the skit for the judges and they never asked us about how much it would cost. It was crazy when we won first place."

Coach Ryan Williams: "I appreciate all the smiles and laughter throughout the weekend. I am so proud of our team, coaches, supportive school, and my family. These are the moments I live for."

Coach Laura Wagner: "This group of kids really came together. They have worked really hard, meeting up to 6 days a week right before the tournament. They are a super bunch of kids, and really fun to be with."

Since FIRST Lego League is something that is hard to explain in words, the Por-Q-Bots are planning some demonstrations to show the community what it looks like. For more information about the Por-Q-Bots, go to the Nashua School website, nashua.k12.mt.us—go to clubs and organizations, then to Por-Q-Bots. ## Second Grade

We have been learning about the presidents!

We celebrated Valentine's Day on Presidents Day. We looked all over the classroom to find letters that spelled out a greeting. Mrs. Cole is a good hider as we are still looking for a few letters. We had treats and then opened our boxes that each student designed as part of our valentine train.

Because they got their 20 good marks for Assertive Discipline, the 5th grade class has chosen to go to the Art room and have Mrs. Hanson instruct them with a project, Luckily, Mrs. Hanson has agreed to this idea.

They have been busy learning about fractions in Math.

Dressing up for spirit days and supporting our High School Basketball teams has been very important to the 5th grade.
